SOCIETAL IMPACT STATEMENT

As a teacher, my goal has always been to make learning fun, relevant and perpetual. My students understand how and why the concepts and ideas they learn in class apply to businesses, their own personal life and the community so they can become better leaders, practitioners and contributors. Thus, I always qualify business practices, concepts and ideas with not just the “how” but place a lot of emphasis on the “why” to help students understand the relevance. I believe when students understand the relevance, and the applicability of these business ideas and practices, they will be contributing members to their society.

In my Business Process Design class, I engage students with projects from organizations and businesses in the local community. The objective of the project is to study a business process in the community, work with them to understand the process and come up with data-driven improvements. I have engaged my students with the following TAMU entities - INFO SSO, TAMU Transit System, PPA Admission Selection Process, programs run by TAMU Student Affairs like the Big Event, Carpool, various Greek organizations, etc., TAMU OISSS, Beutel, Becky Gates Children’s Center and more. The students have also worked with many small businesses in the BCS area like restaurants, bars, nurseries, hospitals and other service businesses. The students experience in applying the concepts from the class to the business and workflow processes has led to personal and professional growth while inculcating a community service aspect to the whole process and could see first-hand how their knowledge could help others.

In addition to enabling my students to be leaders and innovators, I take it as my personal responsibility to serve my community. I have served as an Undergraduate Advisor to our Supply Chain students. In my role as an advisor, I guide students not only with their academic goals, but also support them with exploring their personal and professional growth and their value in the society. I am a leadership coach in the Maroon and White program and an Aggie Mentor. Through these roles, I directly and constantly guide students to better their lives and their community.

I also serve on various committees which impact our students directly. I serve as a faculty senator with the goal of making the TAMU community better. I also serve on the TAMU Academic Affairs Committee, TAMU OER Committee, TAMU Minimum Syllabus Requirements Committee, Mays Scholarship Committee, Mays Assessment Steering Committee, Mays Undergraduate Curriculum Committee, Mays Mindset Committee, Mays Curriculum Update Committee, Mays CBK Committee, Mays Program (Re)Design Committee, and various departmental committees. The primary purpose of all these committees is to ensure our students have the support, curriculum and mindset to be global business leaders.
